The warrant for the arrest was issued by Justice Shearer on an information laid by Annie E. Baker, 28, a neighbor of Thomas, also residing in Reading township. He is being held for January court.

MINE COMPANY APPEALS TAX

Commissioners Grant Reduction to Bethlehem Concern; End Hearings.

Adams county commissioners transacted only routine business at their weekly session Tuesday and in the afternoon heard the last of the tax appeals from the regular triennial assessment.

Representatives of the Bethlehem mines corporation came before the county board to ask for a reduction of their assessments in Oxford and Berwick townships that totalled $142,150. The commissioners were told that since the company has been operating about half the stone on their property has been removed and that operations will probably not continue for more than 19 or 20 more years. They asked the reduction on the grounds that the value of their property has decreased. The commissioners granted a slight reduction and equalized the assessments in the two townships.

Monday the commissioners were at Cashtown to hear the last of the tax appeals listed on their regular schedule that has taken them into every section of the county during the last few weeks. About 50 adjustments were asked and minor changes were granted in a few cases, the commissioners said.

55 to 75 Men Are Working On 3 New Borough Streets

WPA Project in Northeastern Section of Gettysburg Is Progressing Steadily; Application of Native Stone to Follow Grading Operations.

Work on the building of three new streets in the northeastern section of the borough, undertaken as a WPA project about June 1 by the borough council, is progressing steadily with from 55 to 75 men at work three days a week. The federal government is paying the labor costs while the borough is buying materials and equipment for the undertaking.

The grading of the extension of East Lincoln avenue to its intersection with North Fourth street extended is complete. The major part of the grading on North Fourth street also has been finished. About 25 per cent of the grading to be done on the East Water street extension has been finished.

The next step is the covering of the new street beds with a base course of native stone to a depth of six inches. That work already has been started on sections of the new streets and about 500 feet of base course is in place. The native stone is being secured from the Gingle quarry at the east edge of town. It is broken by hand with the WPA paid labor and placed on the streets. The borough roller is being used to make solid any fills that were necessary in the grading work and to roll the stone as it is placed.

The placing of the two bridges that have been provided for by town council awaits the approval by WPA authorities of the separate project that has been submitted on the bridge construction. The two spans—one on Fourth and the other on Water street—will be placed on permanent abutments. The bridge floors will be of wood and will be (Continued on Second Page)

OPPOSES PLANTO TAKE HOME RULE FROM TOWNSHIPS

H. A. Thomson Points Out 'Sad Experiences' In Other States to Supervisors.

C. S. STARNER PRESIDES HERE

More than 100 township road supervisors, auditors and secretaries of a number of boards of supervisors gathered at the court house this morning at 10:30 o'clock for the opening session of the nineteenth annual convention of the supervisors' association. John H. Knox, Cumberland township, the association president, called the meeting to order and then named Clayton S. Starnier, Menallen township, as the presiding officer for the convention.

The invocation was given by the Rev. Dr. Ludwig C. Mortensen, Carlisle street, after which P. A. T. Bower, Butler township, the secretary, read the minutes of the last convention. Russell H. Derr, Cumberland township, was named acting secretary for the convention today.

Opposition to movements aimed at the centralization of government in the state and other efforts to destroy home rule for townships was expressed by H. A. Thomson, Drexel Hill, secretary of the Pennsylvania state association of township supervisors, in an address before the county officials.

Attacks Proposed Amendment

Thomson spoke against the proposed amendment to the state constitution which would place a limit of 10 mills on real estate tax. He declared that other states that have tried the plan have "sad experiences." He asserted that a limit on the amount of the real estate levy would lead to the inevitable breakdown of local government because they would lack sufficient revenue to perform their natural functions. He said that where the plan has been tried schools have been forced to close and other governmental agencies have been crippled.

The state secretary also urged the supervisors to oppose the diversion of motor license funds to any purpose other than use on roads and streets. He asked the convention to urge that state funds for township road work be given directly to the townships instead of being distributed to them through the state department of highways as is done under the present practice. He traced the history of state aid for townships and declared the commonwealth has consistently been in arrears.

Knouse Named a Vice-President Of Pa. Cannery

(Continued from First Page) West. Then, too late to be of much help to our peas, we had occasional showers. We did not then realize these occasional showers would result in fully normal crops of tomatoes and sweet corn, of the finest quality we have ever known but that's what happened.

"We were honest in reporting again and again that we needed good soaking rains and without such rains the crops and our packs would be short. No one was more surprised than some of our eastern canners who were taxed to take care of the unexpected heavy deliveries of sweet corn and tomatoes.

"The combination of fully normal packs of exceptionally fine quality, a market—especially during the extremely heavy buying largely from mid-western buyers) at very satisfactory prices and a million dollars or more worth of free advertisement on the front page of every newspaper of this country is something no canner had ever experienced or expected, but that's what we had. As no canner can fairly expect this favorable combination of conditions to again occur—at least while they are active in the canning business—I suggest we get our feet on the ground and our heads out of the clouds and plan for 1937 on the basis of it being an unusually hard year in which to make a profit."

Speakers at Tuesday's sessions included Christian L. Siebert, executive engineer of the sanitary water board, state department of health; Gordon C. Corbaley, president of the American Institute of food distribution; W. B. Nissley, of Pennsylvania State college, and Harvey R. Burr, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Cannery association.

The nominating committee, which served at this year's convention, comprised W. Scott Silver, chairman; James T. Smith, Fawn Grove; J. I. Burgoon, Gettysburg, and Charles Sweigert, Coatesville.

The bridge floors are being placed at a cost of about $80 each and when borough finances are in better condition, the bridges may be equipped with concrete floors at a cost of about $800 to $1,000 each. The concrete floors will be built to the width of the street—30 feet.

After the placing of the base course of large stones is completed another course of one to one and a quarter-inch stone will be applied and rolled under the provisions of the project. The work is not expected to be completed before late next spring or early summer.

Town council has indicated at meetings when the street project was under consideration that the streets may be completed next summer with the application of a surface treatment and the building of curbs. ple, angered when confronted with a "cat's eye" jewel for which he had inherited a great fear, killed Denning, his antagonist, and was subsequently prosecuted by Hardmuth, rejected suitor of Viola, who was engaged to Clay.

The second act was laid during and after the second trial of Clay Whipple for the murder of Denning. Whipple's final acquittal and Brookfield's crushing of Hardmuth by blasting his reputation on the eve of his nomination for governor were closely tied up with Brookfield's accomplishments in the field of telephony.

The plot of the play was interesting; the dialogue lively with a generous sprinkling of humor, and the performance of the cast was excellent.

Among the audience Tuesday evening was Miss Jessica Weaver, now director of dramatics at Biglerville high school, who was cast as "Mrs. Alice Campbell" when the play was given in Brua chapel. John Colestock and Miss Reida Longenecker also were in the first cast.

The play was produced first in 1907 and has always been recognized as the first American play to deal with ideas. The original basis for the play was a murder trial in St. Louis which the author covered as a reporter.

Ask $500,000 to Help "Sell" Penna.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Dec. 16.—A resolution urging the legislature to appropriate $500,000 to attract tourists and the traveling public to Pennsylvania, was adopted here this afternoon at a regional meeting sponsored by the Pennsylvania Scenic and Historic commission.

The gathering was attended by representatives of civic groups and newspapers of northeastern Pennsylvania. Improvement in business conditions and a subsequent financial benefit to the commonwealth were advanced as the chief reasons for requesting the appropriation.

Orson N. Ritzman, state secretary of the scenic commission, characterized Pennsylvania as "the state that has everything."

Henry M. Scharf, manager of Hotel Gettysburg, is a member of the state scenic and historical commission. This year, the appropriation for the commission was $20,000 which was said to be "wholly inadequate for the program outlined."

Wings For Sally

by BAILEY WOLFE

SYNOPSIS: Philip Page, dark, serious young publisher of the Warrenton Courier, campaigns for better living conditions and backs the workmen of the Morris mill in their fight for better homes. He falls in love with attractive Sally Warren, the society editor who can't forget her former fiancé. Sally is staying with wealthy Mary Morris who pursues Philip despite her father's battle with him. Giles Benton, a detective employed by Mr. Morris, is trying to blame a theater fire on McDonald, a discharged mill worker whom Philip is helping.

Chapter 33

LUNCH WITH GILES

Sally had thought that it would be hard to face Giles Benton the next day. But when he came to get her, she found herself tingling with excitement at the prospect of lunching with him. He had played a game with her, and until now he had enjoyed all the advantages because she had known nothing about him. Now she knew him, knew his purpose, and had resolved to defeat it.

Giles Benton took her to the dining room of the Lanier hotel, where Terry had liked to take her when he had the money. Sally suffered a momentary pang of memory as she and Giles passed the table where she and Terry had liked to sit. But soon the game of conversation with Giles blotted out everything else.

"I shan't be here much longer, I'm afraid," Giles said regretfully. "My work is almost finished."

"I suppose you'll be glad to go," murmured Sally. "It's very hot here this time of year."

"I've formed some very pleasant and some very valuable connections here," said Giles. "I'm very grateful to you for showing me the town." Then he added carelessly, "There's one place you didn't take me."

"Where is that?" asked Sally.

"To Milltown. I understand you're very well acquainted with the place. Mary tells me you took her there to see some friends of yours—the McDonalds."

"Oh, yes, I know the McDonalds," said Sally. "I didn't take you to Milltown because I knew you were pretty well informed about that part of town."

"You knew that?" Giles studied her face, as if he were trying to fathom just how much she knew. "How should I be informed about Milltown?"

"Since you are trying to improve the factory methods, I supposed you'd have to look into Milltown pretty thoroughly to get a whole picture of the situation."

"Very clever of you," said Giles, smiling and showing his white teeth. "But I am interested in the McDonalds. Mary tells me she has sent them food. I suppose the reason McDonald was in the drive that night is easily explainable—he came to thank Mary."

Sally said nothing. Should she admit that she recognized McDonald? To ignore the remark was a tacit confession that she had recognized him.

"You did recognize McDonald, didn't you?" asked Giles. "You didn't say so at the time."

"I barely caught a glimpse of the man," said Sally truthfully. "I should hesitate to say who he was. Is it important?"

"It may be," said Giles. "To our friends, the Morrises."

"And to you?" added Sally boldly.

"To me, also," said Giles.

"I'm sorry I can't be more helpful about that," said Sally. "But now I must go. I've more than used up my half hour for lunch."

"It has been a great pleasure," bowed Giles.

"McDonald's Arrested"

Sally entered the big office to find it buzzing with talk. Lola Hopkins, the girl reporter, greeted Sally with the news.

"McDonald's been arrested for setting fire to the Palace theatre. They've set his bail so high there's not a chance of getting him out."

"But he—he was here in the office last night," said Sally weakly.

"They got him this morning. Took him from home, too, so there's no chance of keeping it from May. May's going to the hospital tomorrow—knowing her husband's in jail."

"Surely there's somebody who can get him out," said Sally.

"The boss would if he could," said Lola. "He's hot about the collar over this. I can tell you. But I guess the only man in town who could go McDonald's bail is old Joe Morris. And Morris is the man that's got McDonald where he is now."

"I don't believe Mr. Morris knows what's going on," said Sally. "If only McDonald could talk to him—"

"You talk to him," said Lola. "You're a friend of his."

There was a hint of scorn in Lola's voice. Lola did not approve of Sally's friendship with Mary or her staying with the Morris family. She somehow included Sally as a partner in the activities of Mr. Morris.

Sally wanted more than anything to see Philip, but he was nowhere to be found. When she had finished her work at the office, Sally lingered, hoping he would come in, but he did not. Suddenly an idea occurred to her. McDonald was accused of crime, and he would need a lawyer to defend him. She would go home and ask her father to take his case. Her father was the best lawyer in Warrenton, and he had taken many cases where there was no hope of pay, because he believed in the cause for which he was asked to fight.

The familiar walk down Rosemary street made Sally suddenly homesick. Although she stopped in to see her father occasionally at his office, she had not been home for more than a few minutes since she had left to stay at the Morris house. As she turned in at her own gate, she glanced at the Page house. How deserted and quiet it looked! Philip had been away, and the hedges needed clipping.

There was an odor of gingerbread in the Warren house, and Sally sniffed it hungrily. The family were all in the dining room, her father, her stepfather and even Ray.

"Hi, stranger!" Ray greeted her. She tousled his black hair as she went past him and kissed first her mother and then her father, lingering by her father's side.

"We miss you, Sally," said Robert Warren. "I'll be glad when this visit is over and you can come back to us."

"The house is a different place with both you and Tip gone," sighed Mrs. Warren. "I used to think so many of you made a lot of trouble and fuss, but now it's really lonesome."

"I miss you all, too," said Sally. "I feel as if I live in a museum instead of a house. There's never anyone to scold me if I don't pick up my clothes."

She sat down and ate supper with them, listening to Mrs. Warren's gossip about the household. Then there was a letter to be read, a ridiculously happy, childish letter from Tip, with a postscript from Terry. They were honeymooning in Rio de Janeiro. They were the happiest two people in the whole world. Tip signed her letter "Mrs. Terry Maynard."

Sally turned restlessly in her chair. It was good to know that Tip was happy, that Terry was happy—but it brought back the keen longing to see Terry again.

When they had finished the dishes, Sally and Mrs. Warren joined Ray and Mr. Warren on the side porch. It was time, now, to tell her errand, and Sally told the story of McDonald, as much as she felt she had a right to tell.

"You will take McDonald's case, won't you, Father?" she begged.

"I've already taken it," said Mr. Warren, puffing quietly at his pipe. "Philip Page was here before you, and I gave him my promise to do what I could."

Sally breathed a sigh of relief. She might have known that Philip would think of this too. He thought of everything.

Sally eavesdrops on an exciting conversation tomorrow.

Nazis London Envoy Cites Colony Need

Con Ribbentrop Warns England Hitler
Is Determined to Scrap
Versailles Treaty.

London, Dec. 16 (AP)—Joachim von Ribbentrop, Germany's new ambassador to London, declared Germany was determined to scrap "the discriminating part of the Versailles treaty" in a speech Tuesday night emphasizing Germany's need for colonial possessions.

"One thing is certain," he said, "and this I cannot help stating:

"Germany has made up her mind to get rid of that discriminating part of the Versailles treaty which no great nation could have tolerated forever."

"To attain this aim by agreement, Der Fuhrer and Chancellor made his offer to the world, but the world, still blind and wrapped up in the mentality which is generally known today as 'the spirit of Versailles,' did not respond."

Speaking for the first time before an English audience since his appointment as ambassador, he continued:

"But Der Fuhrer sees now, as before, in the possession of colonies desired for supply of raw materials only, on one side, and in world trade on the other, two most essential means of raising the standard of life of his people from the present subsistence level.

"A reasonable solution to the colonial question, therefore, is most desirable and to my mind to the interest of all in the long run."

JUST ASK YOUR NEIGHBOR WHY

"It's Buick again!"

The model illustrated is the Buick Special 4-door sedan, $845 list at Flint, Mich. Fenderwells extra.

YOU don't have to go far afield for first-hand testimony on the marvelous goodness of the new 1937 Buicks.

Right here at home—among your friends and neighbors—are folks who can tell you plenty about this handsome traveler —and what makes it great!

Want a frank appraisal of Buick's flash-action oil-hushed valve-in-head straight-eight engine? Ask any Buick owner.

Want to know what Buick's Aerobol carburetor means—about Buick's double-end stabilization—about the soft straight-line certainty of Buick's tiptoe hydraulic brakes?

Just listen to the voice of happy experience!

You'll run into a brand of enthusiasm among Buick owners that makes a salesman's talk sound lukewarm, but don't let that drop you off your feet.

Just that in and we'll show you the cold facts behind the warm fervor—how, in spite of extra bigness, extra power, extra beauty, extra performance, this year's Buicks are the easiest to buy in all Buick history.

JUST IMAGINE! A stunningly handsome and thrillingly powerful Buick 4-door sedan—with valve-in-head eight and eight cylinder—mechanically—but a list price only less than the average six of all 4-door sizes outside the luxury price field.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Auto Plates for Next Year Appear

Pennsylvania license plates for 1937 were seen on the streets of Gettysburg for the first time Tuesday.

Passenger motor vehicles displayed the new tags, which have the outline of the state on their face. The department of revenue permitted the plates to be shown after midnight Monday, in order to encourage early purchase of the plates. No motor vehicle may appear on the roads without 1937 tags on or after January 1.

Nearly 50 per cent more 1937 plates have been issued to date this year than there were 1936 plates at the same time last year, the bureau of motor vehicles reports.

Artificial rubies differ from the natural stones in containing minute air bubbles.
